Aperitif + Digestif

Vermouth + Amaro

Vermouth is an aromatized + fortified wine flavored with various botanicals. The modern version of the beverage was first produced in the mid-18th century in Turin, Italy. In the late-19th century, vermouth became popular with bartenders as a key ingredient in many classic cocktails which have survived to date, including the Martini, the Manhattan, and the Negroni. Amaro, which is also Italian in name, simply translates to bitter. Bitter herbs help promote the production of gastric juices. We strongly advise a vermouth and soda or an amaro before dinner!

Sherry

Sherry is a fortified wine made from white grapes that are grown near the city of Jerez de la Frontera in Andalusia, Spain. It is produced in a variety of styles, ranging from light, dry wines such as Fino and Manzanilla, to full, rich, oxidized wines like Oloroso. We cannot overstate how much we love the stuff. Enjoy these dry styles with rich, nutty cheeses and briny, pickled things. Look for sweeter Pedro Ximenez (PX) sherries on our dessert menu, also.

White Wine

Old World Whites

Old World wine primarily refers to wine made in Europe, but can also include North Africa and the Near East. Wines made in the Old World are often terroir driven and are generally labeled based on the region or place that they come from. Old World winemakers believe that the unique terroir driven characteristics of where a wine comes from plays a more distinct role in shaping the resulting wine than the grape variety itself.

White Wine

New World Whites

The New World wine region includes wines produced outside the traditional wine growing areas of Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. In the New World, emphasis is often placed on the winemaker and the techniques used to bring out the fruit flavors of a wine. Wines made in the New World are often labeled based on the grape varietal rather than the region.

Red Wine

Old World Reds

Old World wine primarily refers to wine made in Europe, but can also include North Africa and the Near East. Wines made in the Old World are often terroir driven and are generally labeled based on the region or place that they come from. Old World winemakers believe that the unique terroir driven characteristics of where a wine comes from plays a more distinct role in shaping the resulting wine than the grape variety itself.

Red Wine

New World Reds

The New World wine regions are wines produced outside the traditional wine growing areas of Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. In the New World, emphasis is often placed on the winemaker and the techniques used to bring out the fruit flavors of a wine. Wines made in the New World are often labeled based on the grape varietal rather than the region.
